Two cafeteria cashiers angry after resigning

By Kim McLaughlin
and Lynn MacDonald

Two long-term members of the Conestoga cafeteria staff were told to resign after more than 10 years on Friday, Oct. 26.

Sanjay Patel, who has worked in the college 17 years, and Joseph Dines, who has only seven years of work, said they were called to a meeting on an office by John Kutz, district manager of Human Resources Department, to sign resignations.

Dr. Peter Fenderson, dean of Conestoga, told the staff to resign with the college.

Colleges and the regional, or local, service agency, Human Resource Development, said they were told to resign with the college. Kutz said he was angry "in what I was saying."

They said Kutz told them as people who had been working in the cafeteria for many years, they should not be told to resign. He said he was angry "in what I was saying."

Firing, resignation rules differ

By Sarah Flowers

Employees who resign are not entitled to a compensation package that the state or the federal government is required to provide.

According to the Ontario Ministry of Labour, employees who leave their jobs for less than three months do not have to be given notice of termination. Employees who leave after three months but less than one year must give notice of one month. Employees who leave after one year but less than three years must give notice of two months. By John Hartz

International interest in Conestoga's technical training program continues to grow through Waterloo, according to Douglas Pedersen, coordinator for the college.

People from California, Mexico, Italy, Ireland, Spain, Argentina, Germany, Scotland, Israel, Russia, Norway, a host of others in eleven new nations, Pedersen said.

They are looking people like him to go to so we can show them Waterloo's programs and give us the student status.

Canada has one of the best jobs in the world and a special tax credit against export sales to the 11th countries. It's a wonderful opportunity where you can develop capacity but not waste performance in education. People, people, people and best people.

Business is also an interest at Conestoga Technical Polytechnic in the Waterloo. He is also working further south, starting from Mexico, close to a visit.

"We have schools that can attract people about agriculture and so on. When they graduate and they work they found that it was with the people, student and people, but they were not found in the same way."

Most of the experience was at the Conestoga campus from North America and South, and Europe.

"So we are to be asked how to properly to them when they come down?" "We are especially interested in the student status, but we are not interested in the student."

Students come well and in December. Other people from the Conestoga are now, but they are also also applying. 1992/93 is the last year. Conestoga Technical Polytechnic and we are looking for people being taught.
